Privacy And Anti-Bullying Policy

Girls for the Cure, a student-led fundraising initiative benefiting women-related cancer treatment and services at St. Mary's Hospital Foundation, is committed to fostering a respectful, non-competitive, curriculum-based learning activity for the young women who participate in this annual event.

Providing communications regarding GFC activities and related-learning opportunities such as the Annual Educational Forum and the Student Scholarship are an important educational component of Girls for the Cure. Should a student, parent and/or donor not wish to receive communications from Girls for the Cure, such as, but not limited to, Foundation and Hospital news, events and volunteer opportunities, please contact the St. Mary's Hospital Foundation at 514.734.2694/gfc@ssss.gouv.qc.ca and we will gladly accommodate your request to remove your name from any future communications.

Upholding our professional conduct and In accordance with "donor bill of rights", no information around pledging of this and or any other foundation/hospital activities are shared.

Also, In accordance with Canadian Law, the Foundation nor the Hospital nor Girls for the Cure use any personal information of children to raise funds.

Students, parents and faculty representatives understand that the young women who participate in GFC are subject to high moral and ethical standards in accordance with each participating school's practices and policies. Accordingly, Girls for the Cure has a "zero-tolerance" policy against bullying and harassment. If bullying does occur through any tools, materials or resources provided by and/or in conjunction with GFC, all incidents will be addressed quickly by the respective school and therefore in compliance with the school's already implemented practices and policies.

By attending events of St. Mary's Hospital Foundation (such as, but not limited to, Girls for the Cure) students and parents understand that filming for news purposed will take place and photographs in general will be taken.
